

Mr. Allen's entire article stresses the point that the Little Rock Public Schools have advanced in conformity with general progress in secondary schools throughout the nation. It is illustrated with a spread picture of the new high school building, now Central High, and with two historic smaller pictures, one of Peabody (High) School, West Capitol at Gaines, and a much older one, Sherman Street High School, a frame building resembling a residence, where Little Rock's first high school was organized in 1869. The high school, he explains, was moved from Peabody to a new building at Fourteenth and Scott Streets in 1885, and then to the present (Central) High School building, on Park Avenue, in 1927.
